

OUR CHURCH OR ZOO CHURCH?
Trinity choir to sing Sunday Services in Zoological Garden.

Bishop Horatio Potter used to raise his hands when a committee from Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in Morris Park, Bronx, Bronx County, visited him daily, and say "Oh dear, oh dear; that church again."

The most of the high church members lived in New York, and were working to introduce into the service their own notions. The low church members were mostly old residents who could not be moved. One minister would find the cleaning of the elements uncomfortable, and could make way for his successor who could go through the same experience. Committees from either side sought the Bishop's aid. The membership had decreased to forty when the present rector, the Rev. Stephen F. Holmes, was appointed about seven years ago. He has been assistant rector in St. Ann's Church, in New York City. Gradually the church communicants have increased to 200, the other church building in Third Avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets, are remodeled, and a new choir was organized. The communicants have been increased by 500, or 600 heads, or 1,200 business men. With the opening of Easter representations of the low church party met in a private room, and a committee was formed which should be responsible for the tide flowing toward Nonconformity in Trinity Church.

The movements made against the angels of the church were not confined to the services depicted on Saturday. In two directions, the rector is a high churchman, although he does not seem to be one himself. He does not believe in such church doctrines. Hence it came to my summary for a quartet choir to chant the answers to the commandments, and the amens, and the responses to the litany, and the creed, all in the language of the nonconformists. The old gentlemen became pale and pale. In consequence of this, the organist was compelled to leave his post. The organist verified part of his story.

One man seemed to be perfectly rational, and Justin White told him so to his friends. He told the Justice that he had received much, and spoke thirteen languages.
